"It is not work that kills men; it is worry. Work is healthy; you can hardly put more upon a man than he can bear. Worry is rust upon the blade. It is not the revolution that destroys the machinery, but the friction. Fear secretes acids; but love and trust are sweet juices."—Henry Ward Beecher, These Times, May 1951.

"If you would know the meaning of love, go not to the dictionary, but read the story of the cross. There, and there alone, can you glimpse its meaning—only glimpse it; for it will take the long ages of eternity to fully unfold all its mysterious sweetness and purity. Yet that glimpse has in it wonderful possibilities; it has transformed sinners into saints, relighted dead fires of hope, and planted faith in bosoms that were but the dwelling places of despair."—By Edward J. Urquhart, The Watchman Magazine, May 1909.

"As the will of man co-operates with the will of God, it becomes omnipotent. Whatever is to be done at His command, may be accomplished in His strength. All His biddings are enablings."—By Ellen White, Signs of the Times, March 2, 1954.
