Abraham Lincoln felt the need of divine guidance at the time of the Civil War. The following touching incident in the life of this great and noble man is related by Mr. James E. Murdock:

"I had once been spending three weeks in the White House with Mr. Lincoln, as his guest. One night it was just after the battle of Bull Run. I was restless and could not sleep. I was repeating the part I was to take in a public performance. The hour was past midnight. Indeed, it was coming near to the dawn, when I heard low tones proceeding from a private room near where the President slept. The door was partly open. I instinctively walked in, and there I saw a sight which I shall never forget. It was the President kneeling beside an open Bible. His back was toward me. For a moment I was silent as I stood looking in amazement and wonder. Then he cried out in tones so pleading and sorrowful:

"O Thou God that heard Solomon in the night when he prayed for wisdom, hear me; I cannot lead this people; I cannot guide the heirs of this nation without Thy help. I am poor and weak and sinful. O God, who didst hear Solomon when he cried for wisdom, hear me, and save this nation!"

Who can tell how much this earnest prayer of the one who was then called by his countrymen to be the nation's Chief Executive had to do with the destiny of our nation in the dark hours through which it passed.

What we want is to preach more sermons with our hands and feet to carry the gospel to the people by acts of kindness. · By D. L. Moody, Signs of the Times, January 11, 1938.
